SOLEMN RITES MARK 2,500TH ANNIVERSARY OF CONFUCIUS

Chinese Hold Colorful Celebration At Temple

OX IS SACRIFICED

Songs And Ceremony Begin At 3 In The Morning

By Larry Lehrbas

A bell breaks the stillness of the early morning... stars still peep from the mellowing sky... the rattle of a cart over cobblestones... the shuffling of feet of the worshippers... the Temple of Confucius half veiled in mystic light... a gong... and the chanting of voices.

Before the first cock crowed yesterday morning—it was three o'clock in the morning—the lettered class of Chinese all over the Republic of China wended their way to Temples of Confucius in every town and city and made the Autumnal Sacrifice to the greatest of all Chinese Sages, Confucius.

In Shanghai the ancient and impressive ceremony of the worship of Confucius was solemnized in the Temple of Confucius at the West Gate in the Chinese City with the old, barbaric ritual of long dead Emperors and Kings tempered by the growing influence of the Occident, modified in coloring rites and picturesqueness but still permeated with the same supreme worship accorded to the Great Sage.

In the Temple of Confucius in Peking the President of China, Mr. Yuan Sheng, was the Master of Ceremonies, assisted by a score of the most prominent officials in China. At the West Gate temple in Shanghai the Master of Ceremonies was Taoyin Wang, assisted by Shen Pao-chang, the Magistrate of the City, members of the Chinese judiciary, Magistrate Yui of the International Mixed Court and heads of the Chinese police and public works departments.

GATHER AT 3 O'CLOCK
Joined by the scholars and students to whom the Great Sage is 'Master' the worshippers gathered at 3 o'clock this morning for the ceremonies which continued until 5 o'clock by which time Confucius and his 73 disciples had all been honored. The Confucian sacrifices, as well as the ceremonies at the worship of Heaven, of Earth, Agriculture, the Sun, the Moon, and lesser departed spirits are always held before break-of-day and terminate at sunrise.

Chinese music to the Occidental ear is wild and flavored of the tin-pan, without rhyme or reason and devoid of the harmony the Western ear delights in, but in the dim morning light of yesterday it was not the profane music of itinerant blind musicians or the gong-gonging, Chinese jazz-murdering theatrical music but the ritual or sacred music of the ages that sounded through the temple. That ritual music had been handed down the years from the time of the Han dynasty when Chi, the great music-master, resurrected the ancient music from burrows and hidden caches. For long after the Emperor Huang Ti destroyed China's books Chinese music was remembered only as the noise of tinkling bells and dancer's throbbing drums.

The plaintive note of the nan-tu is sounded from the bamboo tubes—for all religious ceremonies in the Eighth moon are played in the nan-tu key, corresponding to the Occidental 'A'. Then the picturesque procession of the Ju-chiao, 'The Sect of the Learned' entered the Temple of Confucius and took their ceremonial places amid the burning tapers, curling incense pots and flickering candles.

ALL SPIC AND SPAN
Confucian temples may be overgrown with weeds during the two moons of the year but during the two moons in which sacrifices are made to the Sage everything is spic and span. The dust had been brushed from the altar and the cob-webs and spiders about the ancestral tablet swept into

Paper Charges Sun Yat-Sen Planned To Ally China With Germany And Soviet Russia

Papers Said To Have Been Found After Canton Coup Basis Of Sensational Disclosure; Former German Ambassador Named

Disclosures of a sensational nature that have been published in the Hongkong Telegraph and that have not been replied to by Dr. Sun Yat-sen or Constitutional leaders here purport to reveal that Dr. Sun Yat-sen has been seeking to effect an alliance of China with Germany and the Moscow Soviet Government of Russia. It is set forth by the Hongkong paper that following Doctor Sun's flight from Canton after the revolt against him of forces under Gen. Chen Chiung-ming documents that reveal the purpose of the Southern Leader to bring about the triple alliance were found in a safe and these mentioned as a principal in the plan the former German Ambassador to Peking, Admiral von Hintze.

The following is from the Telegraph of Sept. 22.

It has long since been charged against Dr. Sun Yat-sen that he has embraced Bolshevist doctrines. Up till now there has been lack of concrete proof, but today we are enabled to publish what we know to be irrefutable evidence that Sun has been conspiring to bring about an alliance between China, Germany and Russia, based on Bolshevist ideals. Let us tell the story first in brief.

On July 24 the French newspaper, L'Avenir du Tonkin, published at Hanoi, contained the following paragraph: "Le Gouvernement de Chen-Chiung-ming dévoile des documents originaux établissant le projet d'une entente Sino-Russe-Allemande élaboré par Sun Yat Sen et le Ministre d'Allemagne à Moscou, M. Von Hintze, ex-Ministre à Peking."

On having our notices called to the above, and realizing its importance, we began to make our own enquiries, with the result that the story has been verified beyond all question. When Sun Yat-sen and his officials fled from their homes on the night of Gen. Yip Kue's coup in Canton, the Vice-Minister of Finance left behind a safe. In that safe were discovered certain letters, one being in Sun's own handwriting, proving that negotiations were then being carried on to bring about the alliance already referred to. Photographic copies of those letters have been secured by us, and we have taken every step to ensure that they are genuine before giving publicity.

From the translations, which are given below, it is revealed that the leading spirits in this movement are Dr. Sun Yat-sen and Admiral Von Hintze, the present German Minister to Moscow and who was formerly German Ambassador to Peking. It is shown that Sun, working through the medium of a paid Chinese emissary in Berlin named Chu Wo-chung, has managed to secure the co-operation of Admiral Von Hintze, who, in turn, is planning to be sent secretly to China by the German Government. The correspondence shows that it had been arranged for Admiral Von Hintze (travelling under an assumed name) to be met on arrival at Hongkong by Tse Ah Pak. The latter was then to escort Admiral Von Hintze to Sun Yat-sen's headquarters in Canton. It further reveals that a Bureau was to be established with Admiral Von Hintze as its Head, acting in the capacity of Advisor to Sun Yat-sen. This Bureau was to arrange for Bolshevist agents to be sent to China. A further disclosure is that Sun Yat-sen was keeping the project secret from members of his own Government and that he was conducting his negotiations as recently as March of this year.

It is due to the failure of the former Vice-Minister of Finance in Canton to burn the incriminating correspondence, as directed by Sun Yat-sen, that the scheme has leaked out. We will now let the documents tell the fuller story:

SUN YAT-SEN'S LETTER
The most important letter is one written personally by Sun Yat-sen to Liu Chung-ol, Vice-Minister of Finance in Canton, in connection with the remittance of funds to Dr. Sun's paid emissary in Berlin. This was enclosed in an envelope marked "Important: To be opened personally."

The letter was in the following terms.

Kwelin, March 8, 1922. My Dear Two Elder Brothers, Chung Ol and Ah Pak. I have just received from Chu Wo-chung a letter which informs me that our affairs are progressing. You will understand in reading the enclosed correspondence why the help of both of you is necessary to me. (Burn this letter after having read it.)

1.—Brother Chung Ol, as requested by Chu, must effect the Oklahoma City, Okla., Sept. 24.—Ringling of the curfew at 9 o'clock at night, thus waking the inhabitants of Harrah, Okla., from peaceful slumber, has so roused the ire of the village that a delegation visited Oklahoma City to register a complaint with the County Attorney.

The delegation wanted to file a complaint against the city watchman, who stays up until 9 o'clock to sound the town. The County Attorney was willing, but discovered that, under an ordinance recently passed in Harrah, it was the duty of the watchman to ring the gong, even if he had to stay awake until 9 o'clock and run the risk of waking up the town.

British Consul-General Guest Of Honor At Tiffin

Anglo-Chinese Relations Subject Of Interesting Talks—Mr. Chang Nieh-yun Host

Existing trade and social relations of Chinese and British in China were subjects dealt with in interesting addresses that were given yesterday at a tiffin in honor of Mr. Sydney Barton, British Consul-General, and a number of prominent British residents by Mr. Chang Nieh-yun of the Chinese Bureau of Foreign Affairs and a number of leading Chinese.

The affair, at which Mr. Chang Nieh-yun presided, took place at the Union Club and follows the recent tiffin given in honor of Mr. Barton by the Chinese Chamber of Commerce. Besides Mr. Chang Nieh-yun, prominent Chinese present were Messrs. Chu Pao-san, Fu Sia-en, Sung Han-chang, Shen Lien-fang, Pan Ching-poo, Chin Sing-him, Lo King-kee, Chan Shui-kai, Lo Jackson, H. Lee, F. M. Sah, and Commissioner Hsu Yuan.

Among the British guests, besides the guest of honor, were Messrs. H. G. Simms, G. H. Stitt, E. F. Mackay, H. Girardet, G. Scott, C. F. Garstin, G. L. Kilson, H. W. Lester, P. Peebles and O. M. Green.

MR. CHANG SPEAKS
In opening his address Mr. Chang commented upon the representative character of the gathering, pointing out that it included British and Chinese who were leaders in many diverse activities.

In giving greeting to the guest of honor he referred to the fact that Mr. Barton twelve years ago was senior British Assessor of the International Mixed Court and since then until he became British Consul-General had been attached to the British Legation at Peking keeping in the closest touch through all this period with Chinese affairs and Chinese problems.

In saying Mr. Barton had come to Shanghai at a good time he mentioned smilingly that in the Chinese belief the autumn season was held to be the season of punishment and in the time of the Manchus it was the season when executions were carried out following the fall term of the courts. In this connection he added that Mr. Barton had come, not to wield the ax, but to execute reforms and improvements.

Generalizing in reference to social intercourse between Chinese and British he made mention of the British characteristic of reserve, but asserted that all British activities in China were based on principles of fairness and justice and concerning co-operation between British and Chinese he said he took this term to mean a spirit of give and take.

BLAND'S ARTICLES
Referring to much talked of articles that have lately been published in England by J. O. P. Bland who opposed remission of Boxer indemnity money for the purposes of educating Chinese in England Mr. Chang voiced the view that Chinese merchants or business men who received their training in England cannot but feel kindly toward Britain. He mentioned significantly that he had observed that Mr. Chang Chien-jun, who had been educated in America in establishing large cotton mills at Tungechow had seen fit to purchase the equipment for these mills in the country where he received his education. He was glad, he said, to observe that more open-minded men in England were advocating the proposal to refund a part of the Boxer indemnity for educational purposes and in this connection he mentioned the name of Sir John Jordan.

In his reply Mr. Barton spoke at some length on the general subject of the growth and development of British commerce in China.

KEMALISTS TO DEPOSE SULTAN AND ORGANISE NATIONALIST CABINET

Victorious Army Leaders Plan Complete Overthrow Of Present Ministry, London Told; Crown Prince To Be Nominal Leader

ATTITUDE ON NOTE STILL DOUBTFUL

Wives And Families Of British Officers At Constantinople Leave For Home; Thousands Applying Frantically For Passports

(Reuters Service)
London, Sept. 26.—The Daily News correspondent at Constantinople states that the Grand Vizier and the Ministers of Foreign Affairs and the Interior have resigned, thus indicating the formation of a Nationalist Government and the deposition of the Sultan. His probable successor will be the Crown Prince who is popular with the Nationalists.

London, Sept. 26.—The Kemalist attitude with regard to the Allied Note is still doubtful but most of the messages from Constantinople point to the belief that they will insist on the right to fortify the approaches to Constantinople in any settlement.

Constantinople, Sept. 26.—Lady Harrington, the wife of the British High Commissioner at Constantinople, and the wives of 16 superior officers have departed. The remaining officers' wives will leave today, in accordance with standing War Office Orders. Many journalists and 10,000 Greeks are frantically applying for passports.

Athens, Sept. 26.—In addition to military preparations to retain East Thrace, it has apparently been decided in principle to utilize M. Venizelos on the diplomatic side.

(Reuters Service)
Constantinople, Sept. 25.—Turkish cavalry, estimated at 2,000 sabres and provided with machine guns, has again entered the neutral zone at Chanak. A British mobile column has taken up a position halfway to Erekyurek ready for eventualities.

General Sir Charles Harrington has instructed the Angora representative here to request Mustafa Kemal to order their withdrawal.

He will allow a reasonable time for the communication to reach the Turkish commander after which the consequences will devolve on the heads of the Kemalists if they persist in defiance.

General Sir Charles Harrington controls a number of aeroplanes which may be used for coercive measures, although at the present moment it is considered that the Turks will not push matters to extremes. The French High Commission is endeavoring to influence Mustafa Kemal in the direction of peace.

Constantinople, Sept. 25.—At 11 p.m. today the Angora representative stated that inasmuch as Erekyurek was occupied before the receipt of the Allied note, the Turkish commander requests longer than 48 hours in order to consult his superiors.

Constantinople, Sept. 25.—The meeting between General Shuttleworth and the Commander of the Turkish detachment which entered the neutral zone was of the most friendly character.

The latter immediately agreed to withdraw from the zone declaring that the Kemalists did not desire to go to war with the British Empire.

Turkish Cavalry In Neutral Zone
(Reuters Service)
London, Sept. 25.—The entry of Kemalist cavalry into the neutral zone was officially confirmed in London today where it was stated that Turks to the number of 1,100 advanced in the direction of Chanak believing the British to have withdrawn.

They retired immediately from the zone, however, when they were informed that the British were still at Chanak.

Constantinople, Sept. 25.—It is reported that the Grand Vizier has notified the Angora Government that the Constantinople Government is prepared to resign in order not to embarrass the Kemalists.

Paris, Sept. 25.—At noon yesterday the French Minister at Athens handed to M. Calogeropoulos, the Greek Foreign Minister, a copy of the Allied Note to Kemal Pasha. The Allies' decision has caused surprise and disconcertion in Athens.

A Cabinet meeting was called yesterday to examine the situation.

tion and to decide on the steps to be taken. Widely contradictory rumors are circulating as to what action was decided upon.

General Papanicolaou has been appointed Governor of Thrace.

Pretoria, Sept. 25.—The Government's reply to Britain's appeal for support in the Near East expresses the opinion that the position has altered materially for the better and that there is no longer need for active intervention by South Africa.

It declares that South Africa favors the maintenance of the freedom of the Straits under the League of Nations.

Paris, Sept. 25.—The transport, Tourville, has arrived at Bizerta with 2,100 refugees from Smyrna, including 300 French citizens on board.

Kemalist Forces Increase Rapidly

(China Press Service)

London, Sept. 25.—Kemalist forces are increasing rapidly on the Chanak front according to advices received from Constantinople. Considerable speculation exists as to whether the Turks have guns of sufficient caliber to interfere with the British fleet if it should make a dash on the Dardanelles.

Some reports say that the Turks have recently provided themselves with big guns and would be able to provide serious resistance to any enemy vessels that entered the Straits.

Paris, Sept. 26.—Lord Curzon has left Paris after reaching the agreement with France and Italy regarding the Near East in which Britain has met France's wishes fully half way without making material concessions. The co-operation of France and Britain is thus secured for the immediate future.

The British press in welcoming the result of the negotiations, lays especial stress on the concessions made the Angora Government. Franklin Bouillon is carrying the entente's proposal to the camp of Mustapha Kemal, who he is expected to see on Thursday. All now depends on the attitude Kemal Pasha will take as to non-Turkish control of the Dardanelles.

It is understood that Kemal Pasha will participate in the conference in person provided it is held in Asia Minor which he, as commander in chief of the army, cannot leave.

Russia may be a stumbling block as the Soviet leaders are demanding that they be represented in the conference, otherwise they will reserve freedom of action. The Daily Mail forecasts that Kemal will demand the inclusion of Russia in the conference.

Greek Refugees Aided By Britain

(Reuter's Service)

Geneva, Sept. 25.—The Assembly of the League resolved to ask the Governments represented to contribute to the relief of the Greek and Armenian refugees from Smyrna.

After a speech by Earl Balfour intimating that Britain was giving £50,000, Dr. Nansen and M. Ador announced that the Russian Relief Organisation and the International Red Cross Committee respectively were taking steps to relieve refugees.

The Assembly adopted the Drafting Committee's resolution, expressing confidence that the Council, without in any way interfering with the negotiations connected with the projected Near Eastern Conference, will take any measures that are opportune and justified by the state of the negotiation in order to meet the unanimous wish of the Assembly for a prompt return to peace.

The Assembly today, with only one dissentient, namely, M. Loudon, the Netherlands representative, passed the Council's proposal to increase the number of non-permanent members of the Council from four to six on the ground of the widening necessity to secure representation for the different political groups of civilisations.

M. Struycken (Netherlands) contended that the increase would destroy equilibrium and was contrary to Article 4 of the Covenant.

Tokio Report Tells Why Changchun Parley Failed

(Eastern News Agency)

Tokio, Sept. 26.—A Changchun telegram dated the 25th says that the conference was reopened on Sept. 25 at 3 p.m., when Mr. Matsudaira, the Chief of the Japanese delegates, in accordance with the instructions from the Tokyo Government, made the following announcement:

"It is the fixed policy of the Japanese Government to confine the scope to which the basic agreement is to be applied to the relations between Japan and the Far Eastern Republic, to make the said agreement take effect as soon as it is signed, and to postpone negotiations to be conducted regarding the other questions until after the conclusion of the basic agreement."

"This is a matter on which the delegates of Japan and the Far Eastern Republic not only mutually agreed at the Dairen conference, but also at the preliminary negotiations of the Changchun conference the purport of the policy of the Japanese Government was plainly evidenced. Especially, the stationing of Japanese troops in North Saghalien being an occupation as guaranty for the settlement of the Nikolaevsk affair, it goes without saying that the Russian delegates should unmistakably comprehend from the repeated announcements made by the Japanese Government as well as from the announcement by the Japanese delegates at the Dairen conference."

"As for the Nikolaevsk affair, there cannot be a shadow of doubt as to the fact that there is a mutual understanding between the delegates of the two countries, judging from the supplementary documents in connection with the basic agreement reached at the Dairen conference as well as from the substance of the preparatory negotiation at the Changchun conference."

"Taking into consideration the wishes of the Russian delegates after the opening of the Changchun conference, however, the Imperial Government of Japan, with the spirit of compromise, while intending to apply the Russo-Japanese convention to the relations between Japan and the Far Eastern Republic, has agreed to the Far Eastern Republic and Soviet Russia being parties concerned to the convention to be concluded at the Changchun conference."

"The Japanese Government also agreed to the coming of negotiations with the Soviet Government after the conclusion of the basic agreement with a view to arriving at a convention with regard to commerce."

"More than this, with regard to the mutual prohibition of pernicious propaganda and hostile action, the Government of Japan has shown its conciliatory attitude by every possible means, suggesting that it has no objection to reaching a commercial agreement by written documents. "Notwithstanding the above fact, the Russian delegates have persistently asserted that they are not aware that the stationing of Japanese troops in North Saghalien is an occupation as guaranty for the settlement of the Nikolaevsk affair, requesting the Japanese delegates to show the exact date of the Japanese evacuation from North Saghalien prior to the settlement of the Nikolaevsk affair."

"This attitude on the part of the Russian delegates shows that they absolutely ignore the past circumstances and attempt to set at naught the understanding reached in the course of the preparatory negotiations of the Changchun conference and this is a matter which the Japanese Government finds it very difficult to comprehend."

"So long as the Russian delegates stick to such an attitude, it is altogether needless to deliberate at this juncture upon the items proposed by the Russian delegates at the meeting held on the 23rd instant. Hence the rupture of the Changchun conference."

After making the foregoing announcement, Mr. Matsudaira further added:

"While the Japanese Government has a sincere desire to maintain peace and order in the Far East, it feels much annoyed by the presentation of the Nikolaevsk affair from the Russian delegates, which is outside the scope of the agenda to be discussed at the Changchun conference. In accordance with the instructions from the Tokyo Government, the Japanese delegates are not in a position to continue the conference any longer. If, however, Russia should reconsider her assertion, there is yet a little hope for the continuance of the conference, otherwise the Japanese delegates are determined to break up the negotiations and to return home without delay."

In reply to the foregoing, the Russian delegates made the following announcement:

"We cannot identify the Nikolaevsk affair with the stationing of Japanese troops in North Saghalien. We were notified for the first time at the meeting of September 17 that the occupation of North Saghalien means a guaranty for the settlement of the Nikolaevsk massacre."

"While the Russian delegates understand that the solution of the Nikolaevsk affair is to be made after the conclusion of the basic agreement, we think that no preparatory negotiations have ever been conducted regarding the question of the stationing of Japanese troops in North Saghalien and the question of taking effect of the agreement. It is unreasonable that the Japanese delegates should try to discuss those questions which are advantageous only to Japan. We cannot, therefore, change our original attitude towards the question of the stationing of Japanese troops in North Saghalien."

Hereupon, the Japanese delegates went on to state as follows:

"It is needless to repeat the fact that the Nikolaevsk affair and the stationing of Japanese troops in North Saghalien are an indivisible thing. That the occupation of North Saghalien by Japanese troops means guaranty for the solution of the Nikolaevsk incident is quite evident from several announcements by the Japanese Government and by Japanese delegates at the Dairen conference."

"Though the Russian delegates assert that they do not justify what the Japanese delegates have just stated above, simply because the Dairen agreement has not yet been signed, it is a fact that the Russian delegates at least have full knowledge in this connection. With regard to the Russo-Japanese convention taking Russia has already caused several conventions with other Powers to take effect as soon as they were concluded."

"Japan, with the object of maintaining peace in the Far East and of avoiding disastrous bloodshed, hastened to open the preparatory negotiations so that the questions relating to the basic agreement and to the transfer of seized arms might be deliberated upon as soon as possible and that if possible the convention might be concluded by August 15 of the present year."

"Notwithstanding this, the Russian delegates caused the conference not only to delay for nothing but also to break up. It is most absurd that the Russian delegates should set forth that Japan tries to discuss before everything those items which are advantageous only to Japan. Considering that the Nikolaevsk incident was one of the most disastrous in the history of the world, if there had been a legal Government in Russia at that time, there might have been a regular war between the two countries."

"It goes without saying, however, Japan wishes to solve the affairs at an earliest possible date and to withdraw her troops from North Saghalien. Japan has proposed no excessive demands and the reason the Changchun conference has been compelled to end in a rupture, the Russian delegates are to be held responsible, for which the Japanese delegates want to express their sense of deep sympathy with the Russian people in general."

The Changchun conference was thus brought to a rupture on September 25 at 5:30 p.m.

CHARGE OF ARSON BROUGHT AGAINST SHOP PROPRIETOR

Court Action Follows Sunday Blaze On Boone Road

Charges of arson were brought in the Mixed Court yesterday against Doo Sung-tack, proprietor of a paintshop at 915 Boone Road which took fire early Sunday morning.

Detective Sub-Inspector Conduit, who appeared for the police, declared that they had a strong case against the defendant, who was arrested Monday on North Szechuen Road, and stated to the Court that it was only because of smart work by the Fire Department that sixteen persons sleeping on the upper floor of the place escaped being burned to death. The place was insured for Tls. 3,000, he said, and the police had found a number of open tins of spirits of wine on the premises.

Mr. H. D. Rodger, appearing for the defendant, said that he was informed that the fire was caused by an apprentice upsetting a lamp and asked police assistance in locating the apprentice. The case was remanded one week by Assessor King and Magistrate Tsang. The court went to the scene of the fire to examine the shop.

resistances on Peking and Berlin, amounting to a total of $4,200. That part of this sum to be sent to Berlin must be converted into American Gold Dollars or English Pounds; you should not buy marks, because it is to be feared that the mark will go down and not go up any more whilst the gold dollar and the English pound show a rising tendency. I am enclosing herewith an order for payment, and this will be paid to you from my personal account by my cashier.

2.—Brother Ah Pak must wait in Canton for the arrival of Hintze in Hongkong where he will go to meet him and bring him to Headquarters. This matter should be kept absolutely secret and you will, so soon as you receive this letter, instruct the Telegraph Office to examine with the greatest care all telegrams sent from Europe or from ports of call on the navigation lines between Europe and Asia. If a telegram is received which contains the letter "H." Ah Pak should immediately proceed to Hongkong on the appointed date and wait for the arrival of the steamer.

Before having received the enclosed correspondence, I had written to Chu Wo-chong instructing him to come back to China. Nevertheless, and whatever may happen, $3,000 should be sent to him and you should write him that the date of his return is left to his own judgment. If he still has important matters to negotiate, he will be at liberty to prolong his stay in Germany; otherwise he should come back as soon as possible. It would be better if he could come back on the same steamer as Hintze. Everything would then be easier to arrange.

During the time he will be waiting in Canton, Brother Ah Pak will receive from the Accounts Department a monthly allocation of $300, which will be continued by Headquarters on his return and which will then be assured by Canton. (Enclosed is order of payment.)

The more the Hintze affair is kept secret, the better it will be. Members of the Government should not be informed of it unless it is absolutely impossible to do otherwise.

With my compliments,
(Signed) SUN WEN.
(Burn this letter after having read it.)

VON HINTZE'S ROLE
Sun Yat-sen also enclosed in his letter to the Vice-Minister of Finance a further communication from Chu Wo-chong. This is in the nature of a telegram, which was discovered in decoded form, written on the official notepaper of the Expeditionary Headquarters of the Army and Navy (Sun Yat-sen). It reads as follows:

Berlin, January 1, 1922.
Hintze, formerly Minister to Germany in China, knows thoroughly the situation of China. Having been during eight years on a special military mission in Russia, he has acquired many good relations in that country. He speaks English, Russian and French perfectly. Furthermore, he has the new ideas, and is active and tactful. His plans are in harmony with current democratic opinion. He is a man such as there are very few in Germany.

Before my arrival in Berlin, Hintze had already advocated the conclusion of an alliance between China, Germany and Russia, a plan which is conformable to your secret purpose. Since I have been negotiating with him he has decided to put aside all other political questions in order to devote his whole attention to this matter. It has been decided to organize in concert with us a Bureau, with the object of bringing about this alliance. When, in two months, all the necessary steps will have been taken, he will ask the German Prime Minister for authorization to go to China. In my humble opinion, Hintze should be appointed Director of the projected Bureau. The several heads of the departments should then be appointed. As to the other officials, the material, and the decisions to be taken, these matters should be decided by a Chief Secretary. The Director would discharge the functions of adviser to you. The heads of department should then decide which agents should come to China immediately, which agents should come afterwards, which materials should be immediately necessary and which materials should be imported later on, which steps should be taken without delay and which measures could be decided upon afterwards or executed later on. On all these points, the final decisions would be taken by you in agreement with the Director. Communications thus being established between East and West and the principles of action well established, the scheme would progress rapidly. But on account of his great position Hintze would have to take an assumed name and his participation in this scheme would thus be unknown to the German public.

In due time, I will cable you the name of the steamer by which he will leave, and I request you to send a launch to meet him on his arrival in Hongkong, in order to take him secretly to Canton. The question of knowing if after his arrival in China he will be definitely agreed to and engaged by you is not a matter to be considered by me. In my cable, the letter "H" will replace Hintze's name.

Kindly praying for your decisions.
(Signed) CHONG.
CHINESE EMISSARY'S REPORT
In the above letter was enclosed a communication which Sun had received from his emissary in Berlin, Chu Wo-chong, the translation of which reads as follows:

Berlin, January 1, 1922. To the President.
I beg to inform you that after the receipt of $6,200 in silver coins on July 26, 1921, I sent a draft of $1,200 to my family in Peking, as a half-yearly allowance. I bought a passage ticket for $1,000 and spent $1,000 in personal expenses. The $3,000 balance was converted into 102,000 marks (the exchange then being 34 marks to the dollar) and transferred to Germany by the Deutsche Asiatische Bank.

During the first month which followed my arrival, I had to travel a great deal and make friends everywhere, and I spent 12,000 marks. The second month I spent 7,000 and the third month, having lived very economically, 6,000. I have since been unable to curtail my expenses, as even a German worker needs 3,000 marks a month in order to live. I have now in hand a balance of 75,000 marks. Since I have obtained Hintze's help I have greatly progressed and the scope of my activities is a great deal larger. If a Bureau is established, we shall have to spend three times as much money as we have previously spent. Pressed by necessity and having to bear the expenses of my position, I can effect no further economy, except on my food and daily maintenance.

FOUR years ago Miss Mary Mullen, pictured here, took a job with the County Clerk of San Diego, Cal., and issued her first marriage license. "I'll never marry," she said, as the first happy couple left the courthouse. Two years later she issued her four thousandth license and repeated her vow. Recently she issued her 7,999th license—and then decided that No. 8,000 would be for herself and Chester Duffy, the County Clerk.

I should be obliged if you would send between March 1 and August 1 a sum of $1,200, representing my family's half-yearly allowance. You could have this money sent by your Secretary in drafts addressed to Mrs. Chu Chan-shi, wife of Chu Tze-ying, 91, Lai Che-fou, Peking.

Please send me, also, between the same dates, the $3,000 necessary for my maintenance here in Berlin. They should be converted into gold dollars or English pounds and transferred to Berlin through the Manager of the Deutsche Asiatische Bank, Cheung Hing Street, Canton. Especially do not convert them into marks on account of the possible depreciation. If you send me these sums in due time they will be sufficient to cover my expenses until the end of the year.

Here our plans are just beginning to take shape. It would require six months more to obtain a result. There cannot therefore be any question of my coming back to China now and letting everything drift. Please send me some more funds and give me your instructions.

Hoping you are well,
(Signed) Chu Wo-chong.

A Worthy Cause

People in Shanghai give little or no thought to the deaths that take place daily among the poorer of the native population, in and immediately outside of Shanghai. Neither do they realise the impossibility of the coolie class giving decent burials to their dead, if any at all.

The death rate among children under 3 years of age is very high especially among the little unfortunate who have no specified father and mother. Therefore it is only too true that these victims for the most part receive no burial at all. They are simply wrapped up in old clothes tied about with old matting or cotton bags, and carried to the outskirts of the Settlement and thrown by the roadside.

A public benevolent cemetery, inaugurated and controlled by one of Shanghai's leading Chinese merchants, has been created to cope with this lamentable state of affairs. Besides caring for the charitable side of the question it is extremely important from a sanitary point of view. This cemetery is situated in Chapel outside the settlement and maintains a corps of 40 trained coolies who go out daily to different parts of the International and French Concessions to gather up any bodies they may find and bring them back to headquarters in Chapel where they are placed in coffins and buried.

The contents of destitute coffins are collected and put into jars, coffins found in decay are repaired. It is a custom among the lower middle classes not to bury children under 10 years of age in the family graves or plots of ground; and this adds to the work of the benevolent cemetery coolies who find these small bodies purposely left outside the boundaries of the settlements.

Established in conjunction with the cemetery are also a hospital and a school, admittance to both being entirely free. A feature of these institutions is that the teachers and doctors are educated men who give their services at very low salaries, in some cases for a mere nominal sum.

The writer was taken to the hospital situated in the heart of Chapel, and saw the wretched

Chinese outside sitting on benches ready to be attended to, those with contagious disease apart from the rest.

Inside were various rooms each occupied by a native doctor with the barest of essentials to help him, working away at one case after another. Great faith was shown by the women who brought small children suffering from ailments of all kinds; small babies with severe flesh wounds were given over to the doctor's sole care.

The funds needed for the upkeep of the cemetery are raised personally by this Chinese merchant among his friends, the running expenses for last year being $14,000. And now this benevolent society makes a pathetic appeal for funds through the medium of a foreign newspaper, hoping that their institution will be kept in view as a worthy object for charity. Anyone wishing to subscribe and help on the good work of this institution need only write to Mr. C. S. Wong, The Shanghai Public Benevolent Cemetery, Chung Hwa Road, Chapel, in order to learn about the work that has been done during the past months. Report of work done from 8-2-21 to 27-1-22.

Collected by their own staff

231 Adult Corpses
6864 Infant Corpses
70 Jars of Bones
Collected by their branches:
Sent by hospitals, etc.
4627 Infant Corpses
88 Jars of Bones
12 Adult Corpses

And sent by the Kiangnan Arsenal, 11 Infant Corpses. All the above were supplied with coffins and given a decent burial in the society's own cemetery in Chapel. During this period they gave free of charge to poor persons: 3368 small coffins, 108 jars.

Their public hospital handled during the same period, 10,674 cases attended by Chinese trained doctors, 62,742 cases attended by foreign trained doctors. All medicine and dressings for the above cases supplied free of charge.

One can see from the above report the good work that is being done and realise that no small sum is needed to cover the expenses of this organisation. The Shanghai Benevolent Cemetery will be deeply grateful for contributions from members of the Foreign or Chinese Communities.

CHINESE EDITOR HELD FOR LIBEL FREED ON BAIL

Bail in the sum of Tls. 5,000 was given in the Mixed Court yesterday before American Assessor Jacobs by Mr. T. S. Lee, editor of the Chinese Associated Press, who was arrested in Peking and brought to Shanghai to answer charges of criminal libel filed by Kao Er-hung, Minister of Communications.

Mr. L. K. Kentwell appeared for Mr. Lee and asked that his client be released on personal security but the application was opposed by Mr. L. W. Hartigan, on behalf of the Minister of Communications, who asked that he be forced to put up security for his appearance. Mr. Lee was arrested in Peking and brought back to Shanghai last week.

The Minister of Communications is suing Mr. Lee for libel as the result of a story the Chinese Associated Press carried concerning alleged shortages in Mr. Kao's accounts when he was Superintendent of the Telegraph department of the Ministry of Communications here and which was published in the Eastern Times.

"Four Horsemen" At Isis This Week

What may be accepted as one of the really great moving pictures of the day is the screen dramatization of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" which is continuing to attract packed houses to the Isis theater this week.

The novel by Vicente Blasco Ibañez was one of the hits of novel writing and made Ibañez reputation. In the film version the spirit of the famous novel has been carried on remarkably well. Rudolph Valentino and Alicia Terry have done some of their best work in the picture and the other characterizations are much above the general average of motion pictures.

"The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" will be at the Isis all this week and with the splendid musical accompaniment by the Isis orchestra makes a more than worthwhile evening's entertainment.

Hangchow Baby Show Proves A Big Success

(China Press Correspondence) Hangchow, Sept. 22.—The third annual baby show here closed yesterday with the examination of the one hundred and sixty-eight babies. It was a three day campaign under the joint auspices and leadership of the Provincial Educational Association of Chekiang Province, the local branch of the National Health Association, the local Y. W. and Y. M. C. A.'s, and the women's section of the Union Evangelistic Committee. Twenty-eight doctors assisted in the careful examination, measuring, weighing, etc., of the stream of babies which poured into the Y. M. C. A. building.

Before the campaign proper there was a series of preliminary lectures by local physicians to mothers and women generally. Seven hundred attended a moving picture educational film on "Our Children," and more than two thousand people attended the baby show.

The annual baby show here owes its existence largely to Dr. K. C. Wang who has worked tirelessly in its behalf. It was under his direction that the first of the shows was held three years ago. It is now an established institution and is rendering a real service not only in behalf of mothers and babies, but as an influence for uniting the medical and social agencies of the city.

Baseball Season's Ghost Comes To Bat With Some Important Information

By West

Last night at midnight, just as the foreman of the printing room stalked in with a scowl on his face and a rasp in his voice to ask what in the name of Sam Hill we were going to put on the sporting page, and just as I was on the point of informing him, wearily, that he could search me, who should come floating in through the open window but a good natured little ghost with a big grin on his shadowy face and his nebulous heels exuding clicks as he danced and hopped around on the floor.

"Who are you, and where do you get that joy stuff?" I asked. "Me?" he chirped through his misty teeth, at the same time throwing a spectral handspring that landed him on top of my desk. "Me? Why, I'm the ghost of the baseball season!"

"The ghost of the baseball season?" "That's me, bo!" "Well, then, why aren't you out in Jimmy Dolan's godown, along with the bats and uniforms and other departed relics of the baseball season?"

"DUAL PERSONALITY" For answer to this the jolly little ghost hopped down off the desk and turned a whole series of spooky flipflops, and then—"But that isn't all I am!"

"No? Perhaps you wouldn't mind giving us a look-in on the other half of your dual personality."

Before vouchsafing a reply the funny little chap drew some mystic circles in the air with one of his wraithlike hands, and then—"I'm the guy that put the gallop in Hoppy!"

"The gallop in Hoppy? What thing? You speak in riddles." For answer our jovial visitor twisted himself into another spasm of spiritual somersaults, and then—"I perceive that you are a monumental dunce, which I suspected long ago from reading your stuff. However, I note that you possess some meagre skill as a two fingered typist, so if you will just square away to the old Underwood I will dictate a communiqué which doubtless will be of interest to those who, lacking something better, are forced to read your terrible dope. That will make at least one interesting paragraph in a desert of monotony."

A JAB THAT MISSED This was rather rubbing it in, I thought, and so, peevish, I slapped at him, but my hand passed right through him like a radio message through a brick wall. And so, seeing the futility of quarreling with a ghost, I turned to the old mill and wrote, the ghost dictating:

"The baseball season is not over period. On the contrary comma there will be several good games after the sailors arrive next week period. The opposition will be furnished by a team to be known as Hoppy's All Stars comma the same being practically the Shanghai team that recently completed a most successful season under Manager Gallop period. As the manager is in Japan the work of organizing the All Stars and getting them into trim will devolve upon Captain Hopkins comma which was what I meant by my reference to my being the guy that put the gallop in Hoppy period. All the regulars have assured Captain Hoppy that they will be on hand comma and I am authorized to report that a number of first class games are in prospect comma the sailors having some fine teams comma a fact that is well known to the baseball public of Shanghai period. Captain Hopkins has already started to get his All Stars together and definite announcements regarding the forthcoming games may be expected shortly period."

WE THANK THE GHOST Well, that was a fairly juicy bit of news, and so, thanking the ghost, the foreman and I were just on the point of asking him to have a drink (of lemonade, of course) on the house, but before

Zodiac Indicates Yanks Will Travel Under Tough Planet

If the Giants haven't got the National League pennant in their pockets, it's because they left it home on the bureau.

Worst part of the season is behind 'em like old cow's tail. Sixty points ahead of their nearest customer with nothing off for cash. Sixty-three decimal capers loose from St. Looney Cards, who threatened 'em all Summer but have now curled up like busted sofa springs.

No more games on road. Rest of season is home carnival with out-of-town buyers dropping in to look over samples at Polo Grounds.

One hundred and twenty games have been argued, protested, disputed and otherwise played. That leaves thirty-four more to be pulled and hauled around. Giants are seven complete established games ahead. You can't take anything for granted in baseball except prices of admission, but if New York doesn't win National League pennant we'll eat your hat without cream.

Yanks are something different. Meanest part of work is still ahead. They are hanging around first place like farmhands around employment agency in January. St. Looney Browns are one sore tooth in Miller Huggins's appetite. Yanks have to go on road for rest of season, and what those Western teams won't try to do to 'em isn't in Kaiser Wilhelm's book.

However, they have even chance of grabbing and getting even with Giants for last world series. September should be loaded with sparks for baseball fans. August was plenty fast enough, but next month should smoke like old parlor stove.

Fall Race Season Starts Saturday

The racing season starts here Saturday.

The Shanghai Race Club will hold its fourth extra meeting of the year, with three handicaps, a hurdle and four other events. The hurdle race is the first on the program and the saddling bell will be rung promptly at 1:30 o'clock.

The Race Club Entrance to the Public Recreation Ground will be closed from 1 p.m. until after the last Race.

The Loong-fel (East) Entrance Gates will not be closed except only when Ponies in a Race pass that Entrance.

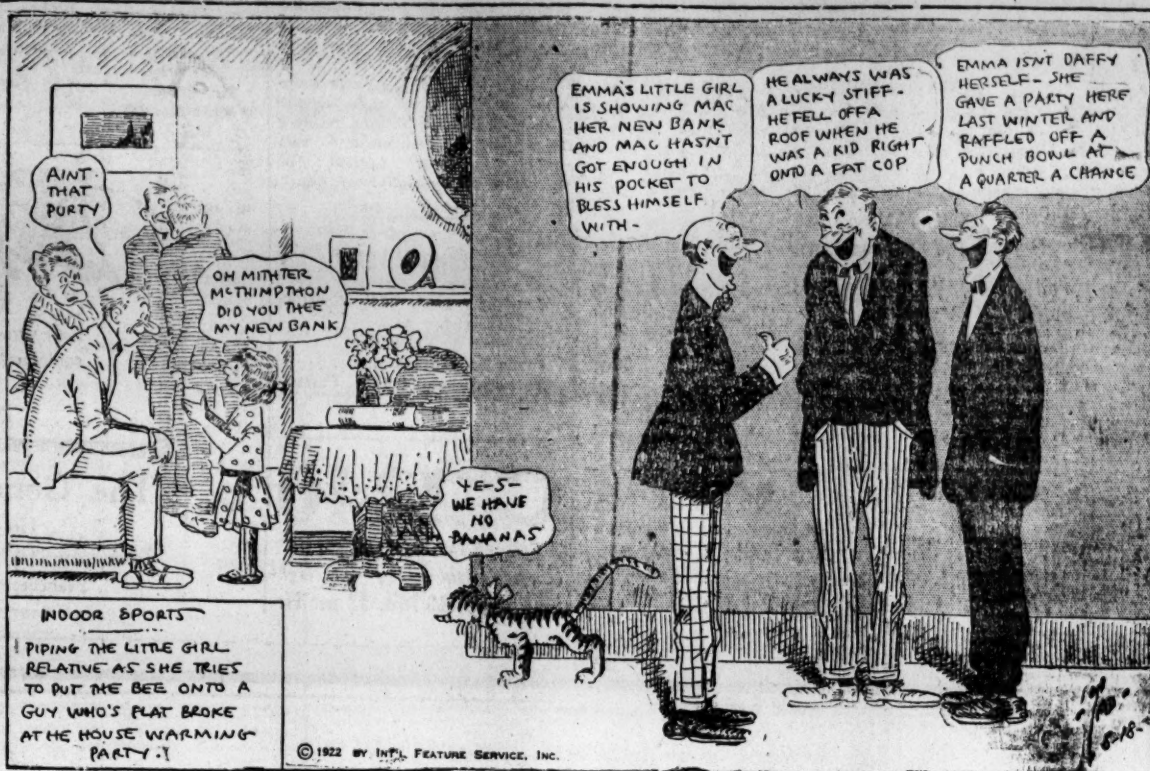

either of us could put the invitation in words our visitor had vanished, vanishing being one of the best things that ghosts are accustomed to doing.

And so, taking the copy sheets from the old Underwood and handing them to the printing room foreman I remarked: "There you are ol' timer. Stick around in the newspaper business a little while and you'll learn that sometimes you can fill a whole gaping column when you have only enough news to make a couple of paragraphs, eh what?"

"Right!" he chirped in his rich Lancashire brogue, completely happy in the knowledge that for one more day at least he wouldn't be compelled, like some printing foremen he knew of, to plug up the holes on the sporting page with the poor old overworked scissors.

GIANTS WIN FLAG IN OLD LEAGUE, 'SERIES' NEXT WEEK

Yankees Will Be Probable Opponents Of McGrawmen

(Reuter's Service)

New York, Sept. 25.—New York today won the National Baseball League Championship by defeating St. Louis 5-4.

The World Series will start at the Polo Grounds in New York on October 4, according to a decision reached by the National and American leagues here today. Last year's admission prices will prevail.

The Giants have won the National League pennant for the 10th time; John McGraw has produced his eighth pennant winning New York team. For a month the Giants have appeared certain of victory.

The above despatch shows that the last week added enough of a percentage to their victories to make it impossible for another team to overtake them in the two remaining weeks of the season. The Giants have repeated a victory for early season "dope."

The starting of the World Series in New York indicate that the National League won the toss for the Yankees have not cinched their rag. A week ago they were only two games ahead of the Browns; one day would suffice to tie the two.

The Yankees have the best all-around team and early season "dope" gave them the pennant on paper. But the Browns have been going just as strong, and the remaining games will be required to determine whether all of the series will be played in New York or half of it in St. Louis.

Portuguese Win Title In Both Tennis Leagues

The Portuguese Sporting Association has captured the championship in both tennis leagues although some games remain to be played next Friday and a week from Friday. The Portuguese have finished their schedules with a big lead in the second division of the Lawn Tennis Association league and a firm hold on the top rung of the ladder in the first division.

To tie the Portuguese, the Shanghai Recreation Club must win 31 games in two days, from the British Country Club and the Shanghai Cricket Club. This is hardly possible. The Portuguese went through the season without losing a match, scoring 70 points in each division.

The men who won the trophies and titles for the Portuguese Association are Arthur Leitao and R. Carnavaro; Alvaro Leitao and G. Silva; R. Roberts and S. Oliveira; J. Ribeiro and A. Gomes; C. Passos and J. Silva. Leitao captained the Portuguese in the first two matches but was forced to resign because of business duties.

Steady Cotton Prices Reveal Basic Strength

(Reuter's Service)
New York, Sept. 1.—The cotton market throughout the week has been tending to discount a bullish Government report and a bullish situation, with the result that prices have done little more than hold steady. That they have done this is an indication to many of underlying strength. The report, with its condition of 57 and indicated crop of 10,575,000 bales, caused some irregularity at first as it was a trifle larger than expected, but it is not really bullish, as the crop has undoubtedly deteriorated in both Texas and Oklahoma since August 25, when the Government and most of the private condition figures were compiled. A crop under eleven million bales, when the world, according to most of the recognised authorities, needs 12,500,000 bales of American, means higher prices for cotton this season. Many expected to see 25 cent cotton before this, and they would probably have witnessed such a price but for the unstable labor and foreign situations which have greatly restricted the volume of outside speculative interest. With Southwestern hedge pressure increasing towards the end of the week, this absence of the usual speculative absorption is keenly felt in the market and but for the fear aroused by adverse weather conditions in Texas bears would doubtless have acted much more aggressively.

GERMANY NEEDS LESS

Already the trade is beginning to consider the probable effect of the lessened demand from Germany this year, which cables indicate is quite likely owing to the demoralised state of German finances, which even now have caused consigned cotton to be returned to American shores. Demand from China and Japan has fallen off sharply and export thus far for the season are much behind those of a year ago. All this is being taken into account by the trade here, as well as the adverse crop news, and a growing number of traders are becoming skeptical of 25-cent cotton until later in the season. Even should the fuel tangle be settled immediately, there are many Southern cotton mills that may have to reduce or shut down entirely for a time owing to a lack of coal.

Those in New England seem to have a fair supply of fuel, and the labor situation there has cleared up to such an extent that production is fast getting more nearly normal. Much talk has been heard about a lessening demand from consumers especially if cotton prices go any higher, but the census figures from month to month do not indicate this, and it is possible that the same would be true if cotton should sell at 25 cents.

MUST FIND REMEDY

A cotton man of broad experience finds that some of the most competent students of cotton have now been forced reluctantly to accept the conclusion that, until some real remedy for the boll weevil is found, the normal annual production of cotton in the United States will be under rather than over 10½ million bales; that the occasional "bumper crops" will not much exceed 12 million bales and that the poor crops will fall to the 8½ million bale level or thereabouts. He points out that even the highest of these estimates represent far less cotton than the world's cotton industry, as now organized and equipped, requires every year from this country; while the smaller figures represent positive famine.

It is little to be wondered at, therefore, in view of this outlook for cotton interests should be looking to possible other sources for raw cotton, and the efforts being put forth to produce cotton in Australia and other parts of the British Empire only represent a desire for self preservation. It is even reported now that extensive experiments with the growing of Sea Island cotton being conducted in Dutch Guinea, show a greater yield per acre than in the United States.

It is the opinion of some merchants in Memphis that cotton in Texas is being swapped around from one buyer to another and that comparatively little of the cotton changing hands is actually finding its way to spinners. Eastern spinners are credited with fair purchases of high-grade white short staple cotton, which is moving coastwise to the New England states. British interests are buying more heavily, relatively than any other group of consumers either domestic or foreign, but even they are not over-exerting themselves, as indicated by the very small quantity of cotton clearing from Texas ports for the United Kingdom.

POLICE GAMES

Entry forms for the sixteenth annual Police games will be available at any police station tomorrow. The meet will be held at the Public Recreation Ground on Saturday, October 28. Two open events are announced, the 100 yards for the championship of Shanghai and The China Press cup, and the quarter mile for the local title and the Bradish trophy.

oblivion. Candles burned on the altar and whips of incense arose to the murky rafters.

The Marshal of Ceremonies, preceded by the musicians and the ensign and umbrella bearers slowly circled the temple interior as the musicians play the measured beats of the Guiding March—a march freighted with plaintive notes of the hsaio flute, the throbs of the drums, the tasseled ti-tan lute, the yun-lo (gong chime) the sheng gongs and the pai-pan castanets. At each measure a priest ran a stick along the toothed back of a tiger with a resultant noise like only that made by a carnival clacker.

Then the piping flutes end in a trill and the drum throbs die-away. All is silent, profound, unusual in a Chinese gathering. The Master of Ceremonies beats a little drum he carries in his hand, a dragon-embroidered standard is raised and the Hymn to Confucius begins.

The Hymn to Confucius is chanted only twice a year and in a different key each time. It consists of six stanzas, each descriptive of the part of the ceremonial under way and each accompanied by a different jumble of high, harsh notes from the wind and stringed instruments interspersed with deep, throbbing notes from stone bells and drums. Before each stanza the Te-ch'ing, a large bell, which in ancient times was caved of jade, is struck once on the fantastic dragon-like form.

First comes the Ying Shen, "Receiving the approaching spirit" for the Chinese believe that the departed spirits come from On High and hover over the offerings when ceremonials are held in their honor. Slowly and monotonously the chanters sing:

"Ta tsai K'ung—tsu
Hsien chueh hsien chih
Yu t'ien ti tsan
Wan shih chih shih ...
—On and on, chanting:
Great is Confucius!

He perceives things and knows them before time. He is in the same order with Heaven and Earth. The teacher of ten thousand ages. There were lucky portents, and on the unicorn's horn a tuft of silk. The rhymes of the song were as sounds of silk.

The sun and moon were unveiled to us,
Heaven and Earth were made fresh and joyful.

The Master of Ceremonies kow-tows three times as the verse ends and rising presents the fruits of earth and wings. The chanters sing:

CHU HSIEN
(Presentation of Offerings)
I think of thy bright virtue.
The jade music ends—the music of metals is heard.
Of living men there was never one like him.
Truly his teaching is in all ways complete.

The vessels are here with the offerings, the same for thousands of years,
At the spring and autumn equinoxes
Clear wine is offered.
The sweet smell of the sacrifice now rises.

The Master of Ceremonies rises and makes the sacrifice of sacred ox. The ox had been killed the night before after it had been led into the temple and made to bow its horns before the tablet of Confucius. Then it had been skinned and anointed with herbs and made ready for the sacrifice on a festooned platform festooned with swirling wreaths of incense smoke. To each of the highly honored, those scholars who have attained literary honors of Hsu-tsai and upwards, is given a small slab of the sacred meat. Under the ancient ritual the Master of Ceremonies ate of the meat and drank from the wine-cup as he passed the sacrificial meat, but now he merely elevates the bloody strip of ox flesh and touches the chalice to his lips. The scholars wrap their treasured bits of ox-meat in yellow paper as the chanters drone monotonously on: YA HSIEN

(Second Presentation of Offerings)
The regular sacrifices should be offered without stint.
The chief sacrificer advances and presents the second offering;
The harmonious sounds are heard of drum and bell.
With sincerity the wine cups are offered.

Reverently and harmoniously,
Approach the sacrificers, men of honorable fame.
The ceremonies are purifying, the music clears the heart.
They work on each other and reach perfect goodness.

Again the Master kow-tows and drops fluttering pieces of silks and satins into the incenseburner. Again the chanters sing:
CHUNG HSIEN
(The Last Offerings)

From antiquity through all the ages
Primitive men have done this.
They wore skin hats, they offered the fruit of the ground.
How orderly was the music!
Only Heaven guides the people.
Only the Sage conforms his teachings to the day and hour.

The moral duties are arranged in their proper order,
Till now the wooden clapper sounds.
The Master of Ceremonies bows his head as his assistants remove the viands as the drums and the flutes and the stringed instruments play on, and the singers chant Ch'e Chuan.

"The Removal of the Viands," in accompaniment:
The ancestral teacher has said:
"Those who sacrifice obtain happiness."

Throughout the four seas, in student halls
Who would dare not to be reverent?
The ceremony concluded, the offerings are removed.
Let none be neglectful or show want of respect,
Let their joy be in him who is the source of their culture.
Let them remember the poem of the beans in the field, and imitate them.

According to the Book of Odes:
"The beans grow in the field. The people gather them. The ming ling has a family of grubs. The wasp carries one away. In instructing your children imitate this good example."

And now the spirit, happy at having been so honored, is supposed to depart for dawn approaches and the milk carts taking milk to the foreigner's houses clatter over the cobblestones outside. The chanters begin Sung Shen, "Escorting the spirit back."

The Fu and Yi mountains are very high.
The Chu and Sau spread their sooters far.
So thy beautiful acts extend their influence globe and around.
Causing benefits without end.
None has been seen the glory of sacrifice.

The sacrifice has been made great and beautiful.
He renovates thousands of our people.
He fosters our schools and halls for learning.
Between each verse the drum beaters have sounded their rolls on their drums. Now they form beneath the colorful processional banners again. The twelve-belled te-chung clatters far and wide. The tiger-box yu is sounded once. The stringed instruments and lutes and flutes take up the Guiding March, and the Master of Ceremonies, followed by the attendants, march out. Confucius has been honored sufficiently until next Spring.

Many of the age old customs were modified at the ceremonial early yesterday morning owing to revised instructions sent out by President Li Yuan-hung through the Ministry of the Interior. President Li, who discarded some of the venerable and ancient customs during his first term as president, again ordered certain modifications which he deemed more in keeping with Jeffersonian simplicity than the old practices favored by President Hsu Shih-chang.

Instead of the old pompous robes, embroidered in silk and decorated with ornaments used by the Mandarins of yesteryear the gathering yesterday morning resembled a college graduates' reunion at a barbecue picnic. The rich embroidered robes were replaced by that height of Republican simplicity, the frock coat, and instead of the usual four kow-tows Confucius got only three under the new rules and regulations.

And formerly a bevy of dancers garbed in flowing embroidered robes and carrying peacock feather staffs did graceful evolutions conveying their admiration and veneration for the Sage but they too were missing yesterday.

They had been fox-trotting at the Carlton the night before, perhaps, and couldn't get up so early in the morning.
...throbbing drums ... the plaintive sob of the flutes ... a glassy-eyed skinned ox on a Brobdingnagian platter ... sealow tailed coats ... the sage of the ages ... curling incense ... a crowing cock!

PEKING REBUKED BY BANKERS, BUT WILL GET LOAN

Several Strings To Be Attached To Ten Million Grant

(Reuter's Pacific Service)
Peking, Sept. 26.—The Chinese Bankers' Association yesterday evening issued the following communique:
The Ministry of Finance recently verbally proposed to the Chinese Bankers' Association the issue of an 11th Year Loan of 10,000,000 dollars at 8 percent interest with 10 percent discount with the assurance that the Bankers' Association would receive a certain commission to be arranged later as was done in the case of the 3rd and 4th Year Loans. Both the principal and the interest would be secured on the deferred portion of the Russian Boxer Indemnity, the said security being kept in custody by Sir Francis Aglen as was done with the 7th Year Short Term Loan, the security of which was also the Russian Indemnity and which is about to be redeemed. The regulations and details were fully explained at a meeting of the Bankers' Association on September 23 by the heads of the Treasury and Loan Departments of the Ministry of Finance. After a long discussion the Bankers' Association decided at follows:
The Government in recent years has lost credit with regard to redemption of loans and Treasury notes, which has resulted in the market values of various loans and notes depreciating until the purchasing public has practically lost all faith in the Government's credit. It is proposed that the loan shall be issued at the great discount of 10 percent but even then we cannot guarantee an easy sale of bonds. However, it would be unsafe policy to allow the Government to be kept in the position of drifting here and there for money particularly at this critical juncture in the history of the Republic. Since the Government has definitely expressed its purpose and outlined the method of disposal of this loan, namely, to use it solely for administrative expenses and expenses connected with the maintenance of peace and order in the Metropolitan area, we, the Bankers' Association, could not reject the proposal as made by the Government but, before formally accepting and in order to help the Government to maintain its credit, we must get a satisfactory answer from the Government to the three following points:

(1) As the Government has stated that the loan will be used solely for the purpose of maintaining peace and order in the Metropolitan district and for administrative expenses during the coming four or five months, a detailed list showing how the proceeds will be used should be given so that the doubts of the public, if such exist, can be dispelled.
(2) In order to recover lost credit the Government should set a definite policy within the shortest possible period for the settlement of all outstanding obligations of the Ministries of Finance and Communications as well as to adjust domestic and foreign loans which have no proper security.

(3) The Government should also provide plans to safeguard all loans and special Treasury notes previously issued by the Ministry of Finance and other departments. The Mid-Autumn Festival Loan of 1921, which was concluded also for the purpose of maintaining peace and order in the Metropolitan district and which is still outstanding, should be redeemed out of the proceeds of the present loan.

THE GREATEST OF ALL
Certain stories—in novel or play form—constitute an important part of our civilization as do the telephone, the telegraph, the incandescent bulb or the automobile; they are an integral part of our life. Only a small number can be counted among this high order: "IN OLD KENTUCKY", "THE OLD HOMESTEAD", "WAY DOWN EAST" etc. Originally written by an English novelist, Mrs. Henry Wood, the novel was soon transplanted to the United States and dramatized as well.
The greatness of "East Lynne" lies not alone in five generations who have known it; the basis of its universal appeal as a book, as a play—and now as a photodrama—lies in its humaneness, its sympathy, its sweetness and its moral lesson. Nothing can long endure which is founded on a false morality; that explains the fleeting popularity of the great mass of our literature, our drama, and our films. It takes an epic tale to endure the taste of time.

"EAST LYNNE"
Is the evergreen, the hardy perennial in the garden of literature and now on the screen.

Living Conditions Inhuman, Chinese Miners Complain

(Independent News Service)
Hankow, Sept. 22.—"Most of our workmen's income is but 70 coppers per day. With this, we buy rice, we would have nothing left to buy clothes. We have to be content either with hunger or nakedness. Every day we work over ten hours in dark holes like animals subject to frequent flogging and scolding."

"We cannot stand this inhuman living any longer, and we want to live like men."

These are the complaints of the workmen in the Pinghsiang colliery, and along the Chuchow-Annyan railway, and are the cause of the strike that threatens to wreck the mines, now filling with water.

The men already have sent their demands, seventeen in number, to their employers, but since they are so many those in authority are unable to open negotiations with them at once, as they have to consider themselves what demands should be acceded to, and what demands should be rejected.

The main points of their demands are that their club should be recognised, that $10,000 should be given out for the club building in addition with $200 monthly subsidy, that double pay should be granted to them for the new year and that no reduction should be made from their pay for sick leave.

Last but not least they demand that foremen should be forbidden to flog them in the future, and ask that coal diggers' wages should be doubled, their promotion be systematic, and for railway laborers whose wages are below 40 cents should be entitled to ten cents increase. They have also sent out circular appeals with a view to enlisting the sympathy of the general public, and convincing them that their circumstances would be greatly bettered if their employers could just spare their cigar and wine money for them.

Red Beards Invite Pursuers To Feast

(Chung Mei Service)
Peking, Sept. 23.—A funny tale is being told about the friendliness of the Hungtutze and the officials of Manchuria. The Chientao district, which is on the border between Manchuria, Korea and Japan is badly infested with these well organized bandits and constant raids are being reported.

However, the story goes that one of these Hungtutze after having carried off a girl in an attack on a village, decided that he would like to marry her. Probably by dint of force, the girl gave her consent and this particular bandit being of high standing, went in for a wedding splurge.

He invited all the high officials of the district and the officers of the garrison which is responsible for suppressing these very bandits. It is said to have been a grand affair and the officials enjoyed the feasting and entertainment provided by their outlaw host.

Railway To Raise Fund By Mortgage

(Independent News Service)
Hankow, Sept. 22.—Feng Yung, Director of the Land Development Office of the Peking-Hankow Railway in Hankow, is now proceeding with the plan of raising $3,000,000 by mortgaging the various land properties along the Peking-Hankow embankment, railway siding and in the Hankow suburb.

The plan is alleged to have been endorsed by General Wu Pei-fu who formerly appointed Feng Yung on the job, and a major portion of the money when raised will go to Loyangfu to pay General Wu's troops and expenses.

The Hupeh Provincial Assembly has raised opposition to the scheme, and has urged the Hupeh authorities to investigate the matter, as the project would greatly endanger the financial system of Hupeh.

Filipinos' Fight On Locusts Successful

(China Press Service)
Manila, Sept. 25.—Reports from all provinces show that the anti-locust campaign has made considerable progress although the pests are still bad in several provinces. The plague has been almost eradicated in Central Luzon and Iloilo and Cebu and the campaign has made considerable progress in Panay, Marikina and Nueva Ecija.

Lee Tells Brotherhood Not To Quit Work

W. G. Lee, president.

LATEST photograph of W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, who sent the following wire to members of his organization: "Don't strike. The Executive Committee of Trainmen is to take up any complaints, investigate them and take a strike vote. Then Headquarters will pass on the situation and a decision will be reached by the Executive Board." The action was taken because of the growing resentment of trainmen against soldiers being used in strike centers.

71-Year-Old Grandma College Student

Mrs. A. P. Crawford

MRS. A. P. Crawford, seventy-one years old, mother of five children and grandmother of many more, is taking a Summer course at Columbia University, New York City. Mrs. Crawford is the widow of a Methodist minister and, in addition to a modern science course, is studying philosophy, literature and the conservative, radical and reactionary tendencies of present-day morals. Optimistic about the present generation and modernised civilisation, Mrs. Crawford believes the girl of today studies differently than her mother did—but knows more.

Noted Churchmen At Vatican Rites

(China Press Service)
Rome, Sept. 12.—Pope Pius today solemnly blessed and crowned the new statue of the Madonna of Loretto. The ceremony took place in the Sistine Chapel in the presence of cardinals, patriarchs, archbishops, bishops and the highest personages in the civil and ecclesiastical branches of the papal court, besides several hundred of privileged and invited onlookers.

After the ceremony the statue was inclosed in a rosewood case with glass panels and taken to the papal automobile which carried it in a procession to the basilica of the Church of Santa Maria Maggiore, where it will be exhibited to the faithful tomorrow.

Korea's Population Shows Increase

The bulletin states that there are 106 Korean men for 100 Korean women, 114 Japanese men for every 100 Japanese women and 6,716 foreign men for every 100 foreign women.

KINGMAN & BROS. How to Preserve the Teeth

In order to keep the teeth in a good condition scientific precaution must be taken. Through negligence, decay and numerous other affections such as tooth-ache, dental periostitis, osteo-periostitis, necrosis of the jaw, etc., may arise. During the process of digestion, there are settled on the teeth some deposits of mineral and organic matters, called tartar, which possesses a morbid power of pressing the gum. As an inevitable result of the presence of this tartar, the teeth will become elongated and movable and will, by degrees, absorb away the enamel, leading ultimately to the decay and degeneration of the teeth. The tartar is so hard and resistant to the process of brushing that it cannot be scraped off except with dental instruments specially devised for that purpose.

Dr. KINGMAN offers to the public his service for preserving their teeth at an annual subscription fee of $10.00 per head to be paid in advance.

The work to be done by Dr. KINGMAN to the subscribers consists in—

- (1) Cleaning of the teeth quarterly.
- (2) Filling with gold platinum alloy only, when the teeth present holes.
- (3) Inspecting the teeth at any time at the desire of the subscribers.

League Plans War On Women Traffic

(Reader's Service)
Geneva, Sept. 25.—The Assembly passed a resolution declaring that as the system of state regulation existing in many countries was thought in many quarters to encourage traffic in women, the Advisory Committee should be asked by the Council to consider whether, pending abolition of the system, it could be agreed that no foreign woman should be employed or carry on the profession of prostitute in any licensed houses.

Tax On Lotteries
Inspires Protests

(Independent News Service)

Hankow, Sept. 22.—About three hundred lottery dealers and shops in Wuchang and Hankow have petitioned General Wu Peifu protesting against the imposition of stamp duty on all lottery tickets sold in Hupeh.

The new tax on lottery business was recently instituted by the director of the Provincial Stamp Duty Bureau with the view of increasing stamp duty revenues for the current year.

The lottery merchants contend that lotteries are conducted generally for some charity or reconstruction purposes, and the tickets are not categorized under dutiable documents.

Eclipse Photos Reported Success

(China Press Service)

Paris, Sept. 24.—Word has been received from Australia that the weather conditions during the eclipse of the sun were perfect and that the American expedition, headed by William H. Crocker of San Francisco and headed by Director W. W. Campbell of the Lick Observatory, succeeded in taking many photographs.

These photographs will play an important part in deciding whether Prof. Einstein's theory of the bending of light is actually borne out by facts as well as mathematically demonstrated by him.

No word has been received from the British and Dutch expeditions which are at Christmas Island.

"SYPHONS, SYPHONS, SYPHONS"

You will find Aerated Waters bottled in Syphons very economical. Frequently you want just one glass, but have to open a bottle for it. The rest is liable to become stale, or to lose its effervescence. With Syphons it is different. You just press the lever and draw off what you require. The rest, in the hermetically closed bottle, remains fresh and effervescent to the last drop. No looking for openers.

Sodawater, "Crystallia" the Champion Table Water, Tonic Water, Lithia, Seltzer, Brom-Seltzer (invaluable in headache), Apollinaris and Vichy prepared fresh daily from the salts manufactured from formulae based on the analysis of waters from the natural springs, may all be had in Syphons.

The Northcliffe I Knew

By Isaac F. Marcossan

With the possible exception of Theodore Roosevelt and Lloyd George, Viscount Northcliffe was the most remarkable man I have ever known. Like these two men, he was not a single human being, but a composite of many personalities.

There were two Northcliffes. One was the dynamic publisher, a flaming turn-of-energy, who thrived on attack and revelled in exposure. His exposure, however, was not of the "yellow" variety. He believed, and he was usually right, that his cause was constructive. The fighting Northcliffe was as relentless as he was persistent. Moreover, few publishers registered success with such uncanny regularity. His one failure, and I believe it hastened his end, was in the quarrel with Lloyd George. Any other man in British public life would have succumbed before the offensive launched by the Northcliffe press. One reason why Lloyd George survives is that he is indispensable and because there is no one to take his place, for the moment at least.

The other Northcliffe was the companionable human being—a sort of Peter Pan who would never grow up. This is the side of him that I knew best, and the aspect that I shall try to describe here. He was playful, even frolicsome. Nothing pleased him more than to "get the goods," as we would say it in America, on one of his friends, and then "rag" him about it. He liked to give people titles. I can best illustrate with the instance of a rather intimate experience. Although he insisted upon wearing the same pattern of red necktie every day, he took peculiar delight in railing at my shirts. He had an idea that they were loud, and as a consequence always called me "the Shirt-King." When I returned from Africa in 1920, one of the first questions he asked me was: "What did the cannibals think of your shirts?" Upon my telling him that one of them had stolen the noisiest patterned one, he chuckled and replied: "His wife will never live with him, once he puts it on." Such was the Colossus of British journalism in his moments of relaxation.

The Great Remonstrance

THE conference at Copenhagen, at which two hundred delegates representing the Protestant and Greek Orthodox Churches of twenty-five countries were present, passed a resolution thanking President Harding for the Washington conference and declaring that the time had come when another one more widely representative should be summoned to consider such grave problems as armaments, economic chaos and other obstacles to world peace. The resolution seemed to contemplate the leadership of such a movement by America, but the appeal is to go forth to all Church councils in all the nations.

It was none other than the military authority and leader, General Tasker H. Bliss, who said that "if another war like the last comes the professing Christians of the United States will be responsible for every drop of blood that will be shed and for every dollar wastefully expended." Under such a responsibility, America should seek organisational and immediate action of the churches of the world in assuring a peace that is without fear. As Professor William I. Hull, the spokesman for the American group at the Copenhagen conference, said, the present peace has been noteworthy for pestilence, famine, disorders, political, industrial and financial, and a litter of little wars.

Similia similibus curantur has not been effective. War has not cured war. Another dose of it—at any rate such a dose as the world has had—will mean a moribund, instead of a morbid, state for civilisation. This medicine must be thrown out of the window, for as a great doctor of democracy said: "If we do not destroy war, it will destroy us."

A million more men under arms in Europe today than just previous to the war in 1914! Heaping up wrath against another day of wrath and debts upon other debts! And the patient afraid to get on without his traditional panacea. Another great war would end war, but by making a solitude of death and calling it peace. The conference at Copenhagen had another sort of peace in mind, as its name suggests—the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches. It is more than a temporary "Truce of God" that it seeks; it is a permanent world-entangling alliance.

whole world. One of his favorite hours for calling up his friends in London was 7 o'clock in the morning. After he had roused them from a sound slumber he would upbraid them for being sluggish. Northcliffe believed in one man power. I frequently heard him say that a newspaper publisher should be a czar, responsible only to himself. His ideal of a newspaper was something like this: "Let one man, the controller, be in final authority. Give him the best experts obtainable and let them alone. A newspaper should be a consensus of the best brains of the best specialists, the clearing-house of the quickest and most accurate news from all theaters of world events; it should have the judgment of daily consultation. Make the paper pay its way regardless of advertising, and independent of everybody. If readers don't like it, they can burn it. If it does not suit advertisers, they can stay out."

While his celebrated campaign against Kitchener was on I asked him why he had waged such bitter war upon the hero of Khartoum. His response was, "I am actuated by two things—truth and necessity." In these two words you have the main springs for most of the Northcliffe crusades.

To a degree greater than any other man in England (his only peer in America is George Horace Lorimer) Northcliffe knew how to gauge that nebulous and uncertain quantity embodied in the words "what the public wants." Although he occasionally registered failure, more often he hit the bullseye. He had the genius, for it was nothing less, of dropping a project like a hot potato, once he felt that it did not register.

The fact that so popular in the dramatization of his theory that people are interested in themselves. What writers call "human interest" was almost as obsession with him. Furthermore, he believed that people not only like to see pictures of themselves but also of other persons and what they were doing. He was therefore the father of what might be called the graphic idea in modern journalism.

THE ONE-MAN POWER

His idea of one-man power led to one of the greatest reforms that he achieved during the great war. He contended that the British Cabinet as then constituted—it included twenty-three men—was too unwieldy for swift and decisive action. He called it "a town meeting." So he pounded away for a compact War Cabinet that could get things done. Just about this time I was stopping with him down at Elmwood House, Kent, which was his favorite country house, because he had bought it with his first big earnings. I asked him why he objected to the then Cabinet. He suddenly stopped and snapped out, "Could twenty-three Lincolns have run your government during the Civil War? Could twenty-three Grants have won it?"

Northcliffe was vain, like most of his kind, but he was frank and unashamed about it. Like Lloyd George, he loved personal publicity. But behind this vanity was a sincere desire to help his friends. During the war he was my fastest rock. I met most of the outstanding British celebrities through him, and various colleagues of mine had the same experience. At himself was a personal bureau of information that did more than any other single agency to govern the virtues of the allied cause. His work as Director of Propaganda in Enemy Countries and I saw a great deal of his inside workings in Switzerland, which was the principal center of distribution. Contributed as much to the German moral breakdown as a dozen major defeats on the field of battle.

Northcliffe had various idiosyncracies, which are the usual by-product of genius. Among other things, and like Joseph Pulitzer, he detested noise. That is why he seldom slept in London. He had two or three establishments in the country, where he would almost invariably go to dine and spend the night. One of these places, a tiny house in Surrey, which he called No Hall Nowhere, and was quite inaccessible. I often went there with him. Despite its inaccessibility, all the London morning papers, and especially his own, were at his bedside every morning at 6 o'clock. How he got them there was always a mystery to me.

It was through Northcliffe that I first met Lloyd George. At that time the present Premier had just been installed as Minister of Munitions and was perhaps the most inaccessible man in the United Kingdom. I told Northcliffe that I wanted to interview him and he said: "It shall be done." This, by the way, was his invariable answer to a request of the kind. It proved to be a difficult nut. I had fourteen engagements with Lloyd George before I finally got that first interview. At one stage of the proceedings, when I expressed the fear that Lloyd George would not say anything worth while when I saw him, Northcliffe's advice was, "You have to take him by the throat and make him talk." I relate this because it gives us a man's idea about life and work. He was never daunted by impending failure, and he smashed ahead, regardless of self and consequence. When he gave his own staff instructions he always said: "Get what you go after, for there must be no excuses."

NORTHCLIFFE AND GEORGE

I believe that I am one of the few men who ever saw Lloyd George and Northcliffe together. Since the breach between these two remarkable men represented such an important chapter in the publisher's life it may be well to dwell upon their relationship. It is not generally known, I believe, that Lloyd George and Northcliffe seldom saw each other. Even at the high tide of their association most of the negotiations were over the telephone and by letter. From a social standpoint they did not know each other.

Shortly after Lloyd George became Premier I made one of my many wartime trips to England. As usual, I went first to Northcliffe, for he was always eager to find out what was really going on in America. It was part of his insatiable thirst for information. Among other things I told him that the British propaganda in the United States had fallen down completely through the lack of co-ordination, and that the Germans were making great headway for their cause. This conversation took place in Northcliffe's office at The Times. He was sitting in a low easy chair in front of the fire, smoking a cigar. Just as soon as I made the remark about British propaganda he jumped up and said: "You ought to tell this to George." He always referred to Lloyd George as "George."

Within ten minutes he had made an appointment for us to go to Downing Street at 6 o'clock. This was the one occasion on which I saw the two great antagonists together, and one of the few times when it happened.

After I had told Lloyd George about the propaganda situation and the need of consolidating authority for it under a single head at the Foreign Office, he asked Northcliffe to suggest a man for the job. He recommended Colonel John Buchan, who became Director of Propaganda, and remained at the head of the bureau until the organization of the Ministry of Information under Lord Beaverbrook.

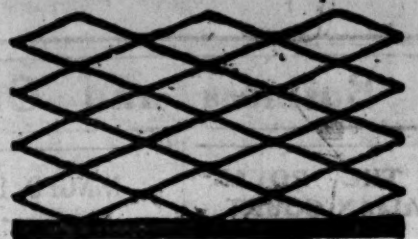

In connection with Lord Beaverbrook are several Northcliffe revelations. Most people believed that Northcliffe made Lloyd George Prime Minister. This is not entirely true. Northcliffe conducted the press campaign that uprooted Asquith, but it was Beaverbrook, who was then Sir Max Aitken and who had risen from a struggling Canadian bank clerk to be one of the most brought about his untimely end. I know of no better way to round out this inadequate summary of Northcliffe than to recall something that relates to Cecil Rhodes, and which I saw in South Africa. Near Cape Town, and not far from the spot where Rhodes died, there has been erected a majestic memorial to him. In many respects it is the noblest tribute of the kind anywhere in the world, for it epitomizes vision and achievement with a thrilling and unforgettable setting. It is built on the side of a mountain and takes the form of a massive flight of marble steps crowded by a Greek temple. Bronze lions flank the steps; all around are pine trees, while behind towers rugged Devil's Peak. In the foreground and on a high granite pedestal is a statue showing a heroic figure of a man seated on a horse, poised for action. The man seems to be looking out over the vast expanse of waters where two oceans meet and where Rhodes himself often sat and dreamed his dreams of empire.

When I looked at this memorial I thought of Northcliffe, for it symbolizes all that he thought and did. The picture of it comes back vividly to me today, now that he is gone.

influential men in England, who really did the job. Beaverbrook was Bonar Law's most intimate friend, and Bonar Law held the balance of power. The five historic meetings at which the new deal was framed were held at Beaverbrook's house, near Leatherhead, in Surrey. I have read the private memoranda of these meetings, prepared by Beaverbrook for his son.

As a result of these conferences a real coalition was effected, but with one condition, namely, that Northcliffe should not have a place in the Cabinet. I believe that this fact is now being disclosed for the first time. It showed that even then Northcliffe had aroused hostility and jealousy in the Whitehall district. I was a useless precaution, because Northcliffe never aspired to public post as such, although there were various times later on when he could have had one. Lloyd George once offered him the Air Ministry, which was promptly declined.

ed. As Director of Propaganda in Enemy Countries and head of the British War Mission he felt that he was doing a patriotic service and not "holding office."

SUCCESS COMPLETE

There was no envy in the Northcliffe make-up, for his success was so complete that he got pleasure out of the progress of others. Concerning Lord Beaverbrook, however, he had a tiny feeling of what almost amounted to resentment because of his rejection with R. D. Blumenfeld. Beaverbrook bought The Daily Express, which was galvanized into life. Although The Daily Mail was Northcliffe's pride and joy, he always recorded the acquisition of The Times as a great achievement. He felt, to use a war phrase, that it consolidated and dignified his journalistic standing.

In 1917, and upon my return from Russia, I crossed the Atlantic to New York with Northcliffe. He was then coming over to head the British War Mission. The German submarines were at their worst, and Northcliffe realized that they would go to any extremes to "get him." One day, as we were walking on deck, he said: "If I should die on this trip, your friend Beaverbrook will own The Times within a week."

No matter what misunderstandings existed between Britain and America, Northcliffe usually took the Yankee side. His greatest disappointment with an American had to do with Woodrow Wilson. It was characteristic of the man that although his closest friends knew of it, he never publicly disclosed his real feelings in the matter.

It grew out of his trip to America as head of the War Mission. On the way over he cross-examined me every day about Wilson, whom he had not met up to that time. I remember he said: "I am prepared to like the President for I admire his qualities greatly."

According to Northcliffe's version, Wilson treated him rather coldly. In explanation he made the following rather characteristic comment: "Mr. Wilson got his idea of a British envoy from Mr. Balfour who is a scholar. He probably looked upon me as a sort of rough-neck and therefore illiterate." This was the only reference of the kind I ever heard him make.

One reason why Northcliffe was able to criticize the Government with such amazing freedom and frankness was that he refused to know politicians in private life. On more than one occasion I have heard him say: "I only see public men in their office or mine. Friendship is a costly commodity for a publisher, for it shackles his judgment."

I would utterly fail in an attempt to disclose the real Northcliffe if I neglected one side of him that few people saw. If ever a man adored his mother that man was Northcliffe. His solicitude for her was the one thing that he would permit to interfere with his work. In England he called her up every day and elsewhere he sent her a daily cablegram. Mrs. Harmsworth is now nearly 90, and the irony of life is that she should survive him.

WHIMSICAL AS A WOMAN
On his purely personal side Northcliffe was as whimsical as a woman. He was moody and he also had a streak of sentiment in him. He never forgot birthdays, for example, and he never failed to send his friends a telegram at Christmas time. The last one that I received from him was on December 27 last, from Colombo. I relate this to show the thoughtfulness of the man. Northcliffe and Cecil Rhodes had much in common because they both saw life in a big way.

Each burned himself out long before his time, for Rhodes died at 49 and Northcliffe at 57. Directly I told Northcliffe in 1920 that I was going to Africa and that among other things I would visit the homes and haunts of Rhodes, he was intensely interested and said: "I wish I could go along." When I got back to London and told him of my adventures he was deeply stirred and remarked: "I have always wanted to go to South Africa. Let us go together next year." Unhappily for me that journey was never made. Instead Northcliffe went on the dash round the world which, together with the animus of the quarrel with Lloyd George,
